to breed artificially. These cows should be in an area roughly of a fifteen mile radius around the local association headquarters. Each farmer who becomes a member of the local association pays a membership fee. This fee is based upon the number of cows owned, and ranges from five to ten dollars per member for life time membership, thereafter the service fee of each cow is six dollars and this provides for three services within a ninety day period if needed. For additional services over three, there is a small extra charge.

At the present time there is no association in the Hope-Prescott area. Mr. Adams, the county agent, along with the Hope Chamber of Commerce and the vocational agricultural teachers of high schools and of veterans, are joining their efforts with those interested farmers in trying to establish a local artificial breeding association in this area. Every farmer will be contacted and every effort exerted in order that a successful association may come into existence in this area.

J. Austin Parish, manager of the state headquarters, will be present at the meeting in the court room of the courthouse at 10 a. m. Monday, August 13. All farmers and other interested persons are urged to attend this meeting.

ective from 1940 to 1944.

Nomination in the primaries, in one-party Mississippi, amounts to election to the four-year term beginning in January.

Unofficial returns from all except two of the state's 172 precincts last night gave Johnson 86,313 votes as against 83,234 for Lumpkin. White polled 94,109 votes.

Votes for other candidates were: Ross Barrett 79,749; Mrs. Mary Cain, 25,318; Jesse Byrd, 22,716; Kelly Hammond, 6,065 and Jimmie Water, 6,678.

Johnson resigned as an assistant U. S. district attorney to make the race.

White, in a prepared statement, said "our fight is States' Rights against Trumanism, and the people of Mississippi against outside interference of big-city politicians."

Johnson campaigned as an avowed dry candidate.

White, personally a dry, said he would not stand in the way of a referendum to allow voters to decide whether liquor should be legalized. State's rights was not an issue in the first primary campaign.

Under Mississippi law, Gov. Fielding Wright could not succeed himself.

In the lieutenant governor's race the runoff ticket will consist of Carroll Gartin, mayor of Laurel, and James Arrington, former mayor of Collins.

Arkansas to Begin Own Crime Probe

Little Rock, Aug. 10 — (AP) — The Arkansas Gazette said today the state senate crime committee will begin its investigations soon.

In his column, the Arkansas Angle, John L. Fletcher wrote that the committee's legal status is questionable because the legislature is not in session and that, therefore, witnesses will be given "cordial invitations" rather than being subpoenaed to appear at hearings.

State Sen. James D. Johnson of Crossett, committee chairman, said:

"We want to find out what's going on. If there's any peddling of dope in Arkansas, we want to know about it. Any information on this subject will be passed on to the federal authorities."

DOROTHY DIX

Take It Easy

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am 28, the mother of two children, and have been married for twelve years. I loved my husband very much, but it was soon apparent that he was a heavy drinker and his cruelty drove us apart. We were divorced in 1949. He came back, said he was through drinking and promised things would be different so we were remarried. In three weeks the old regime began all over, and I had to leave him again. The children and I are now living with my family.

Now I have met another man. He is 28, too, is single and in the service. He knows of my previous marital experience. We have never dated, but I write to him. He knows I like him but not that I love him—which I do. He is going overseas and has asked me to wait for him. He is the bashful type, and I usually have to make the first move. Should I tell him I love him or let things stand as they are until he comes home? I am planning to get my second divorce this summer.

C. M.

Answer: To avoid making a bad situation worse, postpone the new romance until the old one is at least off the books. You have jumped into two bad marriages. Better be careful lest you make a habit of it.

You've Learned Something

You have at least discovered that few things are as futile as a drunkard's promises of reformation. By no means is it impossible, as Alcohols Anonymous, but even they can only succeed with a man of character who honestly wants to amend his ways. Most habitual drinkers are thoroughly content with their way of life, and though they make rash promises to win a point, the backsliding is almost inevitable.

Write to your new Romeo, if you wish, but keep the letter friendly rather than romantic until he returns. Let him make the declaration of love. That's a male prerogative, and though it is occasionally pre-empted by women, I think you're in too much of a hurry to be on with the new love before you're finished with the old.

Dear Miss Dix: How can a girl know when a boy is feeding her a line. I'm 17 years old and have been keeping rather steady company since January. Recently I met another boy who asked me if he might call me. I said he could, but haven't heard from him. I met him on the street the other day and he claimed he had tried to call me but received no answer. I don't know whether he means it or not. How can I tell?

BERNICE

Answer: The gift of divining a man's sincerity should have been given women as a seventh sense. Since it wasn't native common sense plus years of experience is the only way you can discern between a "line" and truth.

Since you have given this boy encouragement while you are allegedly going steady, don't you think he could construe your attitude as a "line" too? There are

Rural Health Plan Outlined for Arkansas

Little Rock, Aug. 10 — (AP) — A blueprint for obtaining adequate medical care in isolated localities has been laid before the first Arkansas rural health conference.

Dr. George F. Bond of Bat Cave, N. C., whose rural hospital program for a poor, mountainous area has been held up as a national model, outlined the plan.

Dr. Bond used Newton County, two sides to every story, and both sides of this tale are open to question.

Dear Dorothy Dix: How can a person let his upstairs neighbor know how annoying unnecessary noises such as door slamming, heavy walking and furniture moving can be in the early morning and late at night?

AMELIA

Answer: Your only solution is direct communication. Tell your neighbor as politely and tactfully as possible that you are kept awake by these sounds and you'll probably get results.

Ark. as an example, but said: "I chose Newton county as an example neither horrible nor shining. It is one of many isolated places in Arkansas that need medical service. This state probably needs 11 facilities such as mine xxx."

He pointed out that the Jasper area was approximately 400 square miles and contained about 8,500 people, many of them poor people like mine back in North Carolina.

Dr. Bond urged Newton and other areas needing medical facilities to:

1. Form a county or regional hospital council, find out what the area has in money, people, crops and resources, and then decide if it can support a hospital or clinic;

2. Work on Blue Cross or some other voluntary hospital insurance plan, which he described as "a necessity for poor counties."

3. Figure on an operational deficit of $800 per bed and try to get 6,000 people in the area to pledge $1 a year each.

The physician said that from the federal Hill-Burton fund was "safe" and had "few strings," but he warned that the local community must keep control of the hospital.

He urged planners to use the free services offered by such organizations as the American Medical association, the Arkansas Medical society, the extension service, farm bureau and others.

"You build the facilities, and we promise that you will get doctors," he concluded.

His talk closed the first day of the conference, attended by some 800 farm and medical people.

Earlier, those attending decided after a question and answer period that the primary rural health need in the state is education at the grass roots level. They urged education in personal hygiene, sanitation, nutrition, group insurance and medical facilities.

Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of the University of Arkansas, supported that view — especially the grass roots idea. Said Jones:

"The first thing people say is put it into the curriculum of our colleges and high schools. I say we have too many things crowding into the curriculum now."

"We don't need formal courses for which students get credit. This credit bugaboo is the worst thing in all of education. We need school nurses and health examinations — a setup to encourage health habits and thinking. Don't make a course out of it. We've got too much of that."

The conference is sponsored jointly by the Arkansas Medical society, the Arkansas Dental association, the extension service, farm bureau federation and council of home demonstration clubs.
